MASTERS IN FINANCE 2025 RANKING

EADA's International Master in Finance rises to 35th position in the Financial Times Ranking

- The school climbs six places in the ranking compared to the previous year.
- EADA Business School's International Master in Finance leads the national ranking in career progression of its graduates three years after completing the programme, as well as in the strength of its alumni network.

Barcelona, June 16, 2025. EADA Business School has advanced six places in postgraduate financial education, reaching the 35th position globally, according to the Masters in Finance 2025 ranking published today by the prestigious Financial Times. The 11-month International Master in Finance is designed for recent graduates seeking a solid professional path in the financial sector.

The Financial Times ranking evaluates various quantitative and qualitative indicators, including salary three years after graduation, immediate employability, the percentage of international students, female representation, the proportion of faculty with a PhD, and participant satisfaction.

One of the programme's key success indicators is its employability rate, with 100% of students employed within three months of graduation. The programme also stands out for its highly international profile: 95% of students come from outside Spain, positioning EADA 9th globally for internationalisation — the highest among Spanish institutions.

In addition, the master's programme ranks 21st globally in the ESG and net-zero teaching category, recognising its commitment to sustainability, ethics, and governance — increasingly valued criteria in the financial sector.

PRESS RELEASE

EADA's International Master in Finance is also ranked number 1 in Spain for the career progression of its graduates three years after completing the programme. It holds the top national position in alumni network strength, reflecting the solid professional connections fostered by the programme.

"We are proud of this global recognition and the significant leap our programme has made in the ranking, especially in an increasingly competitive environment with more institutions participating each year. Achieving 100% employability within three months of graduation, maintaining a 95% international student rate, and ranking among the global top 25 in ESG-focused programmes are all clear signs of the programme's academic rigour," says Jaume Bonet, Director of the International Master in Finance at EADA.

As part of its international focus, the programme includes an intensive study week at Skema Business School's Paris campus. EADA maintains a strategic alliance with Skema, which this year secured the number 2 spot in the same Financial Times ranking.

About EADA Business School

EADA Business School Barcelona was founded in 1957 by a group of entrepreneurs and professionals as an independent institution, both ideologically and financially. Recognised by top international rankings such as the Financial Times, EADA holds prestigious EQUIS and AMBA accreditations, which endorse the quality of its MBA programmes.

Over the past decade, the institution has taken a strong stance on sustainability, promoting research and education in this vital area. In 2017, EADA launched its first programme in corporate sustainability — the Master in Sustainability and Business Innovation — a pioneering initiative in both Spain and Europe. Since then, building on cutting-edge research and the expertise of its academic team, the school has developed five specialised programmes in sustainable business. The Leading What Matters manifesto defines the purpose and mission of EADA Business School.
